SPRING is only one week off now, but not a sprig of the Independent Citizens' movement is showing.

The Census Bureau has kindly refrained from casting doubt upon the actual existence of St. Louis.

BILLS for the removal of the State Capital should be regarded by the Legislature as devices to waste time.

ENDORSEMENTS of Maj. HARLOW's protection of the Post-office from the assaults of political thugs continue to roll in.

ARE the Democrats of Missouri willing for their party to go upon record as afraid to investigate the conduct of its officials?

THE Legislature has an opportunity in the Sparks bill to make organized robbery by political committees an impossibility in this State.

THE ardent desire of the citizens of Sedalia to have the State Legislature meet in their thriving city every two years shows what strange freaks sensible people will sometimes be guilty of.

BETWEEN yesterday's POST-DISPATCH and to-day's SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH the journalistic possibilities of the Sherman funeral have been exhausted in giving the public the first and best reports.

THE adoption of the Nicaragua Canal bill, now under discussion in the Senate, would commit the Government to the policy of constructing foreign public works and to the subsidy business on the whole-sale plan.

THE claim of the widow of Gen. BARRETT for $1,000,000 from the United States Government for the killing of her husband serves to remind the people of the United States of a humiliation which they would have given ten times that sum to have avoided.

IN CHARLES FOSTER of Ohio the President has found a man for the Secretaryship of the Treasury who lives west of the Alleghenies, but derives his financial ideas from Wall street. He is thoroughly identified with the trust promoters and millionaire monopolists and his nomination, while it preserves the pretense of choosing a Western man, is really a sop to the East and a slap at the West.

THE work of preparing Jackson Park for Chicago's World's Fair has been at a stand-still since 2,000 men invaded the park on the 14th inst. and drove out the alleged "foreigners and scabs" who were employed there. A very unwieldy labor trouble has been added to the site troubles and pecuniary difficulties that have so successfully prevented any progress in the Fair preparations ever since the location was voted to Chicago last year.

THE victory of the Farmers' Alliance has brought Kansas into line with Missouri in one respect at least. The farmer Representatives have passed a bill prohibiting the employment of a private police force, half military half detective, to maintain public order. Kansas will no longer rest under the imputation that her State authorities are unable or unwilling to enforce her laws without the aid of PINKERTON's migratory guards.

THE impudent pretense that American sailors would get in increased wages the benefit of the subsidy demanded for the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. elicited a crushing reply from Representative DOCKERY of Missouri. He showed from the company's own records that the crew of its steamship City of Peking consists of 35 white officers of various nationalities, 36 Chinese firemen and coal passers, 31 Chinese sailors, 36 Chinese waiters, stewards and cooks, and 8 Japanese servants.

GLADSTONE, PALMER and many others may be cited as proofs that English politics do not wear a man out as quickly as the American article. Mr. GLADSTONE is in his 82d year, but one night last week he made a long speech in the House of Commons and remained afterward till the adjournment at 2 o'clock in the morning. If his public life had been passed in Washington wrestling with office-seekers and lobbyists and listening to the buzzing of the presidential bee, he would have been worn out long ago.

COMPETITION in tax dodging has been carried so far in Illinois that the cities having between 10,000 and 100,000 inhabitants are forced to petition the Legislature for authority to levy taxes for local purposes upon a separate local assessment. Avoidance of State taxes has cut down State assessments so low that they do not yield enough revenue under the constitutional limitation upon local tax rates and indebtedness. They are not as magnanimous as St. Louis or they would permit their State assessments to be increased and cheerfully pay more than twice their just share of State taxes.

CONGRESSMAN CHAIN of Texas has proposed a constitutional amendment to change inauguration day to April 30, and the time for the meeting of each Congress to the New Year's day succeeding its election. This would secure better weather for the inauguration ceremonies than Washington generally has on the 4th of March, and it would devote the declaration of the electoral vote on the Congress elected at the same time as the President. It would also put the members elected in November at work carrying out the will of the people within two months after their election, whereas now they do not meet till thirteen months after their election.

Probably nine-tenths of the people would welcome such a change, but in the way of its attainment stands the almost universal feeling that we can get along very well under the constitution as it is, and that there is danger in beginning to alter it.

PASSING AWAY.

Although Gen. GRANT was the idol of his party while it was adding the bitter memories of the reconstruction period to the bitterness of the war, the surviving soldiers of the South united with the Union veterans in recognizing his great public services and in attesting a united people's grief and loss at his funeral. Gen. JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON of Virginia, who rode with Gen. SHERMAN at the funeral of Gen. GRANT, went to New York again the other day to act as a pall-bearer at the funeral of Gen. SHERMAN, and from the chamber of death in that city to Calvary Cemetery in St. Louis the eyes of his former enemies in battle have followed the body of another dead Union hero to its last resting place, remembering only that he was one who honestly loved and bravely served his country in a way to reflect honor upon all of his countrymen.

Yet SHERMAN's was a name identified in the Southern mind with what the South considered the most cruel phases and measures of the war. He did not stop to explain that considerations of mercy made him a loud and impetuous advocate of the most crushing blows and harshest policies that promised a speedier termination of the war. His abrupt and rugged expressions concealed the real generosity and tenderness of his nature from all but those who knew him well, and probably no other Union general was as much hated and denounced as he was in the South at the close of the war.

But from distinguished Confederate soldiers like Gen. JOE JOHNSTON and others who knew him better, the whole people have acquired a juster appreciation of his true character, his motives and his heroic qualities and services. The veterans of both armies and the people of all sections are fully represented in the testimonials of national respect and pride that attend his funeral. So fade the mutual misapprehensions and animosities of our civil war from the minds of those who fought most bravely in it, and their children joyfully realize that we are again one people as we gather reverently at the rapidly multiplying graves of the generation that so nobly illustrated the courage and patriotic devotion of our national character.

THE TRUSTS AND THE TREASURY.

The general readiness with which the report was credited that ex-Gov. FOSTER of Ohio would succeed WINDOM revealed a widespread impression that the office had "gone a-begging," and that the President was hard up for Cabinet material. Ex-Gov. FOSTER, or "Calico Charlie" as the newly appointed Secretary is called, is an Ohio man of the Brice type—that is to say, a Western millionaire with Eastern partnerships and principles—a man who knows how to raise big piles of money for political purposes and place them "where they will do the most good."

His financial ability has been illustrated by the acquisition of a very large fortune through successful combinations of plutocratic influence in politics. As one of the political wheel-horses of the Standard Oil Trust, the organizer and chief owner of the Window Glass Trust, and "standing on velvet" in probably half a dozen other trusts, he has been far more successful than QUAY in QUAY's own line of business, and will certainly outshine QUAY as the head of the Republican National Committee whenever it shall feel constrained to unload QUAY.

But the tender of the Treasury portfolio to a man of such engagements and associations is one of the political symptoms that keep the people uneasy and anxious. One of the earliest precautions the founders of our government took in regard to the management of our fiscal affairs was the enactment of a statute providing that no man engaged in the importing business should be eligible to the office of Secretary of the Treasury. There were no trusts and monopoly combinations then seeking to control our fiscal policy in their own private interest, or the statute would have been more careful to exclude them from the management of the Treasury than to exclude individual merchants.

AN UNPLEASING CONTRAST.

As asked what GROVES CLEVELAND, Gov. PATTERSON of Pennsylvania or Gov. RUSSELL of Massachusetts would do with a law approved by himself as Governor and requiring him to see and verify monthly reports from the Treasurer, Auditor and depositary banks, the Democrats of Missouri would say with one voice: "He would compare and verify those reports every month or promptly enforce the penalties 'of the law.'"

Every Democrat in Missouri would indignantly resent an insinuation that either of the three men named could be capable of such misfeasance in office as refusing to obey so important a law during eight or nine months, while the Treasurer was feloniously making a large deficit in the State Treasury by gambling off large sums of the State's money.

The reputation for unflinching fidelity to duty of the distinguished Democrats we have named is so well established and the party is so justly proud of it that no Missouri Democrat would for a moment harbor a thought of their being obliged to connive at the concealment of other official defaults, or to shield their own official defaults. Either one of them in a combination to conceal the bottom facts of a series of embezzlements and to keep the public from knowing just how and by whom the deficit was made would be a spectacle not conceivable as a possibility. No one can think of such Governors making soft places for the brother of a Farmers' Alliance President and bargaining for the suppression of legislative investigations by means that are prima facie confessions of official guilt.

That we have to look to other States for examples of the course a Democratic Governor should have taken with reference to the Noland embezzlements is humiliating to every sentiment of State pride. The Democratic masses of Missouri are as honest and high-minded as those of any State and as much ashamed by peanut politics and unclean methods in their State Administration.

THE Census Bureau was exempted from the operations of the civil service law in order that the eleventh census enumeration might be made under strictly partisan influences. The Senators who have enjoyed the patronage distribution under this arrangement are now trying to make a wider gap in the civil service law by an amendment to the sundry civil bill providing that the bureau clerks employed on the census shall be transferred to other branches of the public service, instead of being discharged, when their present work is done. Why not pension them for the most creditable census service that was ever rendered in this country?

KATE FIELD FORBES the International Press Club because at the Pittsburgh meeting separate banquets were provided for the men and women journalists. She thinks this a snub to the women journalists. The distinguished Washington editress does not recognize the privilege of seating them next to the women's rights when the club provided a banquet for their sisters of the pencil. In the olden time they would have been compelled to wait on their brethren and eat at a second table. Even now it is customary among less gallant men than journalists to merely allow the women the privilege of seating them next to the dainties of the season and the wine from the gallery of the banquet hall.

THE fact that young JOHN JACOB ASTOR did not use the words, "And with all my worldly goods I thee endow," when he was married to Miss WILLIAMS has caused comment in the East and West. It is expressed as to the opinion the bride entertained on this omission. If she is a clever girl it makes little difference to her, as she knows that her wedding ring gives her a first-class pull on the Astor purse while he lives and a power interest in the Astor millions should he die first.

THE experience of the St. Louis man whose celluloid cuffs caught fire while he was poking the coals in a grate is a solemn warning of the danger of losing one's temper when wearing celluloid. Think of the consequences of getting "hot in the collar" at such a time.

INSTEAD of making unkind remarks about Boston's society women on account of the décolleteness of their gowns, Mrs. STANLEY should thank them for preparing her for her contemplated trip to Africa.

ST. LOUISANS may look forward to a discussion of sweets when the Confectioners' Convention meets here in May.

A PROPOSITION to remove the Legislature from Jefferson City would receive a large popular majority in the State.

NOW THAT South Dakota has sent KYLE to the Senate, there should be no more trouble there about digestion.

Blushing in Public.

From the Philadelphia Press.

The spectacle of the Prince of Wales as the most puerile, powerful and potent arbiter of delicate points in gambling no doubt is most annoying to the fine and cultivated senses of the gentleman of Europe. But in the present gambling scandal case, as in other affairs, it seems it is only the publicity that writhes the future ruler of Great Britain and Ireland. What one of the Anglo-Saxon chroniclers said about William the Conqueror applies to the Prince: "He did not think it a shame to do what it was a shame to tell."

ENGULFING WAVES.

Reports of Fresh Floods in the Upper Ohio Tributaries.

THE WEST VIRGINIA TOWN OF RIVERSIDE ENTIRELY UNDER WATER.

A Critical State of Affairs in Cincinnati—All Streams in Southern Illinois Bank-Full—The White River Overflowing—Collieries on the Schuylkill Flooded—No Alarm Felt at Cairo.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 21.—For two days warehousemen and merchants from the lower side of Pearl street to the river have been busy removing their goods out of the way of the flood. Cellars from Second street to the river are already more or less flooded. Zeal in this work has been much stimulated to-night by the continuous rains and unexpected rise on the Ohio and of news of fresh floods pouring into tributaries already full on both sides of the Ohio from Louisville to its head waters.

Old river men who last night thought the water here would not go above fifty-two feet fear to-night that it will not stop short of fifty-eight feet, which is a great flood. The high water and the bridges have caused the entire suspension of navigation to and from this port except by small boats. Indeed, at this stage of the river freight can neither be received nor delivered at most towns and cities on the Ohio, Cincinnati included.

The partial restoration of telegraph communication has brought news of fresh floods and recent rainfalls at the upper tributaries that have never been known before, nor anticipated, all of which occasions much alarm here. The latest news from Pittsburgh that another rise was expected there shortly increases the apprehension. Add to this the news of swollen streams in Eastern Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, and there seems to be ground for apprehensions. The weather is cold and clear and the sun is shining, but, however, at this juncture would cause alarm.

Havoc in West Virginia.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Feb. 21.—The flood at this point began to decline slowly to-day, after reaching a gauge of 44 feet 10 inches. The entire town of Riverside, a suburb containing about 1,000, is inundated, but the houses and the people are safe and well cared for. The Ohio River Railroad is under water, and no trains are running. The Belmont and Eureka depots and derricks, tanks and houses have been carried off or ruined. The destruction in this city is incalculable. There is a single saw mill, refinery or manufacturing plant along the Little Kanawha front that has not been under water. Hundreds of men are thrown out of employment, and homeless and homeless people by the hundreds are quartered in the Court-house, city buildings, halls and private dwellings. The distress is appalling. On the lower side of the Kanawha many people were forced to the hills and are now camped out exposed to a terrible downfall of rains, hopeless, helpless and hungry.

The Little Kanawha took a sudden rise again yesterday, adding to the distress. About 10 o'clock last night the flood reached a gauge of 44 feet 10 inches. The entire town of Riverside, a suburb containing about 1,000, is inundated, but the houses and the people are safe and well cared for. The Ohio River Railroad is under water, and no trains are running. The Belmont and Eureka depots and derricks, tanks and houses have been carried off or ruined. The destruction in this city is incalculable. There is a single saw mill, refinery or manufacturing plant along the Little Kanawha front that has not been under water. Hundreds of men are thrown out of employment, and homeless and homeless people by the hundreds are quartered in the Court-house, city buildings, halls and private dwellings. The distress is appalling. On the lower side of the Kanawha many people were forced to the hills and are now camped out exposed to a terrible downfall of rains, hopeless, helpless and hungry.

No Fears at Cairo.

CAIRO, Ill., Feb. 21.—The annual flood is coming out of the Ohio River, leaving much damage in its wake in cities not protected by such magnificent levees as surround Cairo. At 9 o'clock to-day the water was made and one danger line here, at which it breaks over its natural banks and submerges the bottom lands, and it is now spreading out rapidly. The rising stage of the river has been compelled to shut down. Egyptian darkness also prevails, as the flood has extinguished the fires at the gas-works.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—A heavy fog hangs over the Atlantic Coast to-day, and telegraphic communication is most seriously interrupted. The fog extends from away up in New England far down in the Carolinas. Reports from Sandy Hook state that the fog is so dense down there that no steamers have been signalled to-day, although a number are known to be off the coast, waiting for better weather before venturing into the harbor. Dispatches from Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore show that the same state of affairs exists in those cities.

In Southern Indiana.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Feb. 21.—A constant rain has been falling in the Southern half of this State, such as has not been witnessed for years. All of the rivers are out of their channels and still rising. The house of a fisherman has been thrown into the river by the falling of a bank and two people are reported drowned. In several places the river has changed its channel and great damage will result.

On the Kaskaskia.

CARLETON, Ill., Feb. 21.—The Kaskaskia River is rising at the rate of six inches an hour at Carle, and at Vandalia, thirty-five miles up the river, it has risen ten feet since yesterday morning. The sudden rise will interfere with work on the new steel bridge which is being constructed by the Ohio & Mississippi Railway at this city.

Rising Two Inches an Hour.

CATTLETOWN, Ky., Feb. 21.—The Ohio River now registers 45 feet 8 inches on the gauge and is rising two inches an hour. The first rain that has occurred in this section for months fell last night and it is still raining to-day. The big Sandy rising at all points above with heavy rains. A heavy snow is expected in that stream.

All Low Land Under Water.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Feb. 21.—The heaviest rains that have fallen in this section for years have prevailed for the last two days. All creeks have overflowed and all low land is under water. Trains have been delayed for several hours on account of a washout west of this city. The water is now receding and traffic is resumed again.

Collieries on the Schuylkill Flooded.

READING, Pa., Feb. 21.—Heavy rains during the past twenty-four hours have swollen the Schuylkill River and its tributaries. The river has been rising all day, and damage is threatened along its banks. A number of collieries operated by the Philadelphia & Reading Co. have been flooded, throwing hundreds of men out of employment.

Raining Since Christmas.

JACKSON, Tenn., Feb. 21.—It has been raining almost constantly in this section since Christmas, preventing all kinds of farm work and gardening. For the last few days the rain has fallen almost incessantly day and night. All the water courses are unusually high and the roads are almost impassable.

In Southern Illinois.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 21.—The drought in Southern Illinois is at last broken. A part of the State is deluged by one of the heaviest storms in many months. All of the streams are bank full. Over three-fourths of the wells have been dry for months.

Crops Benefited.

BOONVILLE, Ill., Feb. 21.—The long drought has been broken here by copious rains and wells and cisterns have been filled with water again. The rain that has fallen will be of inestimable value to the wheat crop.

On the Genesee River.

MOUNT MORRIS, N. Y., Feb. 21.—The valley from this village to the creek, a distance of two miles, and from the Genesee River to Danville, a distance of sixteen miles, is under water.

CRISPI'S OVERTHROW.

Due to an Article by Gladstone in the Contemporary Review.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—A dispatch from Rome this afternoon says the article which Mr. Gladstone wrote under the nom de plume of "Outlandish" in the Contemporary Review for October, 1889, was undoubtedly the principal cause of the overthrow of Signor Crispi and his ministry. The article in question was reprinted in Italian and widely distributed throughout Italy. In it Mr. Gladstone pointed out that Italy was a country which had contrived to live on a quarter of a century of peace, during the time of her restored independence, to treble taxation of her people, to raise the charge of her debt to a point higher than that of England and to arrive within one or two short paces of bankruptcy. The appearance in the triple alliance of a country so circumstanced was, Mr. Gladstone, did not scruple to say, no better than a gigantic piece of tom foolery, which was so strange as to be grotesque, and which would even be more comical than a puppet show. The recent signal defeat of Signor Crispi in the popular chamber shows, as does the policy of the new ministry, that the people of Italy are coming to realize the number to hold the option to which Mr. Gladstone gave such vigorous and convincing expression eight months ago.

SWIFT JUSTICE.

The Murderer of a Railroad Conductor Taken from Jail and Lynched.

SALIDA, Col., Feb. 21.—About 6 o'clock this evening Pat Sullivan, conductor of a work train, saw Oliver Reilly, work-hand on his train, carrying a big chunk of coal away from the coal chute, which was against the order of the company. He ordered the man to drop the coal, which he refused to do. A few words exchanged, when Reilly dropped the coal, drew a revolver and shot Sullivan in the side inflicting a wound from which he died at 8 o'clock. The dead man was a general favorite with all who knew him, and his death was a great loss. The murderer was at once arrested and lodged in jail. About fifty deputies were sworn in to guard the prisoner and resist the mob which it was rumored would attempt to take the prisoner out and hang him. About 8:30 a mob of 150 attacked the guard, who fired, wounding two men. At 9:30 another mob of 200 men and a guard was shot through the wrist and the balance of the guard overpowered. Reilly was taken to a railroad sign and hanged. Fifty men in this vicinity have wrought the people up.

Two Deputy United States Marshals Killed at Raton, N. M.

RATON, N. M., Feb. 21.—Z. S. Russell and J. W. Cook were fired upon this evening from ambush and instantly killed by unknown parties. They were riding near here and had no thought of danger. The assassins are thought to be Mexicans, and bloodhounds have been put on their trail. Cook and Russell were both deputy United States Marshals for the district of New Mexico.

MYSTERIOUS MISSION.

DR. FINNEY AND MRS. LIVINGSTON AGAIN VISIT HASTING'S LANDING.

They Claim to Have Accomplished the Object of Their Trip, But Cannot Disclose the Nature of Their Business Yet—A Strange Case.

With the wind blowing a perfect gale and driving before it the flakes of snow which were falling thick and fast, a man and woman wended their way along the bluffs of the Mississippi River at Hasting's Landing. Thursday morning, and seemed thoroughly indifferent to the storm which was raging about them. The woman was comfortably clad in a picturesque hunter's suit with a dangerous looking revolver peeping out of a natty belt. In her hand she carried a heavy walking stick of hickory. Her companion was encoined in a huge fur overcoat, which seemed proof against any kind of weather. They chatted merrily as they strode through the wild rugged country and they finally brought up at a farm house about two miles back from the river. The man was Dr. A. Gordon Finney and his companion in the rustic costume was Mrs. Livingston, though it would take a second glance to recognize in that strange garb the stylish little lady who is such a familiar figure in St. Louis. They were spending a few days at the old spot where they stopped for weeks last summer, when their mysterious pilgrimage created so much talk and conjecture in this city, where both are well known. The farm-house to which they walked was the place at which they were stopping.

It was not long before the inhabitants of the quiet little hamlet known as Hasting's Landing became aware of the presence of Mrs. Livingston and Dr. Finney, and the village and farm gossip were soon bustled discussing the return of the pair to the place after all that had been said to them last summer. There were five in the party at that time and now there were but two. It puzzled the gossips to account for whereabouts of the other three and no one could get up a theory which seemed to meet with the approval of all the others. After considerable conjecture it was finally agreed among the natives that Dr. Finney and Mrs. Livingston had fished the hidden treasure for which they searched so assiduously last summer, and that they had come to take it away. It was known that parties were kept there all winter by the pair on a watch of some kind, but just what they were guarding or watching was never known. Thursday night Mrs. Livingston was seen to take a skiff on the Illinois side alone and row across the river, though the wind was blowing furiously at the time and the water was very rough and choppy. After waiting a few hours she was joined by Dr. Finney. The pair were seen again Friday morning and then they disappeared as mysteriously as they had come.

When Dr. Finney and Mr. Livingston left Hasting's Landing they came to St. Louis, arriving here yesterday morning. A Post-Dispatch reporter found them both yesterday at Dr. Finney's dental office in Pope's Theater Building. They laughed when the above story was made known to them. "It is rather accurate," remarked Mrs. Livingston, "though I am surprised that you visit to Hasting's Landing has become known. I thought we had escaped observation, but seems impossible for us to make a move without it is recorded. We were down there and the description of our costumes is correct. It is also true that I rowed across the river alone in a skiff and a hard pull it was, for the river was in an awful condition. It was storming and the water was very rough. I went there last Monday and Dr. Finney followed on Wednesday. We just got back this morning. We took a skiff along the bluff while there, just as the story states, and stopped at a farm house located as described."

"Is it true, as the people there believe, that you found the hidden treasure for which you were hunting?"

"It is true that we have got what we have been going there for. Of course there was a lot of foolishness in those stories told last summer. We were down there then on business and made our trip there this week on business also. I have had business there that I have been working at for five years, and I have frequently made trips there, though until last summer I never went with Dr. Finney and Mr. Hunnicke. I had to take some men into my confidence and get them to make the trip with me and I took them. What the business is I cannot state to you, as it is a very private matter, though perfectly legitimate. We have accomplished what we were after and some day we will make it all known and it will prove a genuine sensation, but at present it would not pay to say anything. It is a business that will pay Dr. Finney much better, I think, than anything else would for the same amount of time and labor."

"It will certainly pay me much more than I could ever make carrying on my profession as a dentist," concluded Dr. Finney. "And you have men employed at Hasting's Landing to look out for your interests there?"

"Yes, that is true as is stated in your story. We have men there watching something for us," said Mrs. Livingston, "and the people there are very anxious to know what it is they are doing and are constantly questioning them to learn the exact nature of their business."

Culture for Workers.

The Workmen's Self Culture Club programme of exercises for the coming week is as follows: The Civic Club will meet on the South side with Mr. Plank on Monday evening, and have a talk on the "Cabinet Officers at Washington." The Municipal Branch will meet on the North side on Tuesday evening with Mr. Sheldon. They will spend their time making a study and taking extracts from the "Mayor's Message" for the last year. The working girls' branch of the club will meet for their literary work on the north side Monday evening, and begin reading "Miles Standish" of Longfellow. The regular entertainment for them on Thursday evening is to be arranged by themselves. They will have the lecture hall entirely for their own use on that occasion. For the South side section the working girls' branch will have an illustrated lecture on travel, "Pictures of Switzerland," the latter part of the evening will be given to Shakespeare readings with the assistance of Mrs. L. D. Hildebrandt. The regular lecture for the working girls on the South side will be on Thursday evening, "Familiar Facts in Science" by the lecturer, Dr. H. M. Whipple. For the North side section the entertainment for working men on Friday evening will be a literary one, a Longfellow birthday celebration, reading, music, etc., by Miss Sessinghaus.

The North side section is at 1523 Franklin avenue, and the South side section at 2004 1/2 South Broadway. The entertainment will always be free to workmen and their families.

Shot Dead at a Dance.

PERICE CITY, Mo., Feb. 21.—On Wednesday night at a dance in the town of Monett, four miles east of here, on the Frisco Road, two young men of that place, Tom Hendricks and one Lane, quarrelled and commenced to fight. When they were on the outside of the dancing room they both drew revolvers and each fired one shot at the other. Hendricks recoiled backward into the door and fell dead, while Lane escaped unhurt. A bystander named Charles McCauley was shot.

KEEP THE BALL ROLLING

Our great reductions on Bedroom Suits, Sideboards and Parlor Suits are rolling them out lively. We must make room for new productions, which are now daily arriving from our factory. Our non-resident partner (President of manufacture) instructs us to sell all our sample suits, regardless of former prices or cost of manufacture. We obey instructions: Our solid oak $35 Bedroom Suits go this month for $24; other suits in proportion, for we must have more floor room. Our immense six-story double store and "annex" are crowded with the best graded stock of Furniture in the country. We can furnish a neat little flat in latest style for $50 to $150, as well as a palace for $1000 to $10,000. If buyers will examine our stock before buying they will save regrets afterward.

GENERAL SHERMAN.

A short time since Gen. Sherman turned over to us all the plates, maps, etc., of his famous MEMOIRS WRITTEN BY HIMSELF.

We now have the exclusive right to the publication of this great book, and have issued a new and enlarged edition uniform with the MEMOIRS OF GEN. GRANT and GEN. SHERMAN. Carefully indexed and illustrated with steel portraits, maps, etc. 2 vols., 8vo., about 500 pages each.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & CO.,
3 EAST 14TH ST., NEW YORK CITY.

In the back, but not seriously wounded, it is thought by Hendricks. No one seems to know who fired the first shot. Lane is now under arrest, and being held for preliminary examination charged with killing Hendricks.

Burglars Showmen.

MONTICELLO, Ill., Feb. 21.—The Bohard Bros., circus was stranded here to-day, and the proprietors, Charles Bohard, John Bohard and Alexander Tatman, were arrested for larceny and burglary. A search warrant was issued and Constable David Deardoff searched their show wagons and found all kinds of articles that they had stolen from farmers near Monticello. They were arrested and taken before Judge A. T. Pipher, who held them in a $1,000 bond for burglary and larceny. They failed to give bond and were committed to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. This breaks up the show.

Stabbed in the Face.

CLARKSVILLE, Mo., Feb. 21.—A very serious cutting affair took place here to-night in which Constable Thomas Fielder, was very seriously stabbed in the face by a couple of drunken negroes whom he was trying to arrest, the worse cut being under the right eye, which, it is feared, may prove very serious. The negroes are under arrest.

SEEN IN THE WEST.

THE FUNERAL TRAIN.

Shortly after 8 o'clock this morning the Union Depot was thronged to its utmost capacity by those who came to witness the arrival of the funeral train containing the body of the late Gen. W. T. Sherman. The Reception Committee of twenty-five, appointed by the Citizens' Committee, assembled in the hall of the second story of the Union Depot. As the time for the arrival of the train approached the committee descended the stairs and took a position at the main entrance of the depot, facing the train. Jas. E. Yeatman toward Twelfth street, and then toward Pine street. The military guarded the caisson, and the caisson was escorted by the Twelfth Infantry, Gen. Sherman's first regiment, under command of Sergt. P. J. Carmody, marched around it as a guard of honor, and the family and funeral party, who had entered cariages, brought up the rear.

In a few minutes the caisson had been made to receive the body of the old warrior and pay to it the last tribute of respect. At 10 o'clock six troops of the Seventh Cavalry clattered up Broadway, turned into Locust street, rode to Twelfth and formed column in front of the caisson. The caisson, the Twelfth Infantry, the Second and Third Cavalry and Pine street. The two batteries of light artillery, one from the Second and the lance, expressed his regrets at seeing him in such a condition and asked where he was laid to rest. With a sigh he said: "Bleed at heart." Howard said: "In future, Gen. Kearney, we can buy our slaves in pairs."

Gen. Sherman, the commander of the Army, is an Ohio man, and at the outbreak of the rebellion was acting as a professor in the Washington University of this city. He served two years and afterwards was transferred to Sherman's army, commanding the Twenty-third corps, sometimes known as the "Old Guard," and at the close of the war he was at the head of the army at that moment as an independent commander. The battle of Franklin, and what part he took in it is a matter of dispute, many giving the credit to Sherman. It is said that since Sheridan's death he has been in command of the army.

Gen. Schofield commanded one wing of Sherman's army on the march from Atlanta to the sea. He originally came from the Army of the Potomac, since the close of the war he was made an active Republican, having figured both as a Republican and a Democrat. He is frequently referred to as the man who changed his political allegiance. He was a Republican nomination for Congress from New York district, and the next day wrote a letter expressing his sympathy with the Democrats. He has since served two terms as a Democrat in Congress.

Secretary of Agriculture J. M. Bush is a member of the Society of the Tennessee and Mississippi River, and is one of the members of the Loyal Legion. He is also one of the few example of a man who shot himself into popularity.

The career of Secretary John W. Noble is too well known to require recapitulation. He will be remembered mainly in the city for several days and is quartered at the Indiana.

Gen. J. M. Corse is well known as the hero of Albatona. During his defense of that point he received a wound in the neck and ear which was at first supposed to be serious. When relieved by Sherman's army Sherman was very angry that he had been wounded and ordered the surgeon to remove his bandages. When the wound was uncovered it was seen to be a slight graze and the surgeon abruptly remarked: "Well, Corse, they came very near missing you."

Gen. Corse was subsequently postmaster of Chicago and is now postmaster at St. Paul.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles is the youngest officer with a rank above Colonel in the army. If he lives to 64, the age of retirement, he will be the youngest general in the army.

and every general officer in the service will have been retired for age.

Capt. Charles King is well known as a soldier in the Civil War. He is the son of Gen. Rufus King of Milwaukee. He did not serve during the war, but later entered the army and fought in several of our most severe Indian campaigns. When Gen. Merriam commanded that regiment King was his Adjutant. He was retired on account of a wound received in a campaign against the Apaches.

Gen. Thomas Ewing is well-known in Missouri. He was a prominent radical during the Civil War. He was a member of the U. S. S. rendered him extremely unpopular with the Confederates of this State. He afterwards joined the Democratic party and has represented Missouri in the U. S. Senate.

Since his retirement from the Presidency Rutherford B. Hayes has taken no active part in politics, but has kept up his army connections. He is now a member of the Command-in-Chief of the Loyal Legion.

Two officers of the Army of the Tennessee were mentioned in the list of the "Old Guard" of M. F. Force, now Governor of the Soldiers' Home at Sandusky, O. He was shot through the face when Hood assaulted Sherman's army at Vicksburg.

and before his wound healed rejoined the army. He has long been Treasurer of the Army of the Tennessee.

Francis W. Webb of New York, the son of James Watson Webb, commanded a division of the Army of the Potomac, and during the battles of the Wilderness was shot through the head. The wound was supposed to be mortal and his recovery furnished one of the most remarkable cases in surgical annals.

Present among a group of Loyal Legion men at the Lindell were Gen. Wager Swayne, formerly of Ohio, but now of New York, and Gen. Lucius Fairchild of Madison, Wis., ex-ammunition commissary of the Grand Army of the Republic. Gen. Swayne is minus his right leg, lost under Sherman during the Atlanta campaign, and Fairchild has left an arm while in command of the Iron Brigade at Gettysburg.

deputation of 100 of the Army of the Tennessee from Chicago. The man who has been Treasurer of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee since its organization, was at the Lindell with the Ohio Loyal Legion delegation.

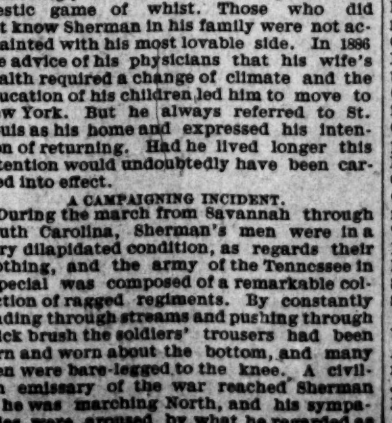

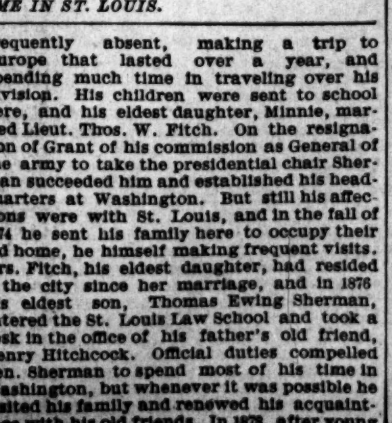

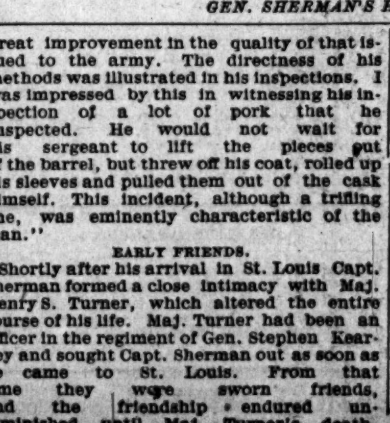

At the same time, the Ohio Loyal Legion organization, and his private Secretary, Mr. Barrett, were also in the city.

J. M. Kennedy headed a Loyal Legion delegation from the Columbia River.

THE SOUTHERN'S GUESTS.

St. Louis Artists' Work.
The exhibition of paintings in the new building of the Bell Telephone Co. has proved a gratifying success to the artists. The attendance and sales during the past week have exceeded their expectations. Owing to the fact that neither the pictures have not been sold to the best advantage, but the management has overcome that difficulty by introducing electric light.
